

Day 9
5/21/13

Prosper- working on helping education in Uganda
Simbus- tribal chief leader.

Why were they born where they were born?
1) the people of his tribe believe the first man and woman were Kintu and his wife Nambi
They settled south Africa and they are all their descendants
2) Their ancestor is adam from Israel and after towel of Babel they spread to Africa

The main religions are catholic and protestant

What tribal beliefs need to be strengthened for the future?
above the knees is considered unmodest. The upper body is okay
What is hondura's view on modesty?

How does Uganda feel about the Millenial goals?
Doesn't like the goal for education. The goal is to make education free
The country does not have the means to make that happen- schools need money to progress
We need to ask why is Africa poor? Why don't women have equal rights? Why is there not enough food? ect.
The real issue is the culture. Africa is poor but they are happy! The attitude is changed.
The Millunium Goals are superficial. Instead need to invest in two areas:
1) education- need to transform the culture and is only done by education
2) partnerships- (equal!)

They want to preserve culture but modern is trying to take over

In many countries, one of the approaches to help the country has to do with land reform
This upsets tribal boundaries, who should own the land and why?

You are not allowed to ask how many children people have
It is too personal, shows their assets
It would be like in U.S asking how much money you have

Does Uganda want help or are they happy without it?
If you want to help, then help- give them what they need & dont ask.
Orphans are getting all the aid so other children wish their parents were dead

What would you put forward for Uganda?
What if we didn't focus on the negative but instead on the positive?
Would that be a good position for the U.S?

HW:
What is the face of richness in Honduras?
